My wife and I travel in our RV. Before satellite radio we constantly struggled to obtain any weather and traffic information while we were on the road. The satellite radio information has been very useful and made our travel much easier. It is impossible to locate weather and traffic information as you drive to and through the area of a strange city. You can't possibly know where the information is on the radio and if you find a local station if they will provide that information and how long you will have to listen if before they provide it. It has also been very beneficial to us in another way. As we travel across an area we were constantly searching for a radio station that was clear enough to receive. Sometimes this causes us to tune our radio in an unsafe manner. This process has to be repeated often as stations fade in and out. The ability to use satellite radio to pick a station and leave it on has eliminated the need to constantly work with our radio and made our travel much safer.
